all present, including the experts, because he is a real good, sound, honest American bred.

When the judges declared him the best dog of any breed, color or sex the Garden rang with applause. Few present had eyer seen him before and only a handful of experts knew his fine intimate points. But he was an Airedale, a popular, real man's dog, and he was an American bred, and from the time he entered the ring until he was crowned he was the favorite.

Boxwood Barkentine is owned and was bred by Frederick Hood of Boston, a man who has been a keen student of the Airedale for many years. His kennel has produced more winners than any hreeder I know. Barkentine is only 20 months old. He has a wonderful head. His ears have been criticised in some quarters, but in my opinion they are the kind an Airedale and do the work an Airedale terrier is supposed to do. And an Airedale can do all any other dog can do and a little more.

Hise Fine Feet and Legs.

Barkentine has gun barrel legs of good size, straight and true. His feet are splendid, not flat and open but real compact with sound pads that can work if necessary in any sort of going. He has a fine neck, without a bit of coarseness, and it is strong throughout. His shoulders are set properly, not lumbersome but clean. His back is level, his chest of good depth and he has an unusual spring of ribs. There is plenty of strength and thickness in his hind quarters and not once while he was in the ring did he lose his nerve or become excited.

There were 106 Airedales on the enches at the show and Barkentline's lettery puts the breed back where is slongs—at the head of the list.

A young Englishman named Emmet Carburton showed him, and no Airedale was ever put down in better bloom. Its coat fairly glistened, he had the sal Marcel wave. In fact he made the purpession on a ringsider that the man heresion on a ringsider that the man. ression on a ringsider that the man

The judges were three men with almost lifelong experience in judging. Two were professionals, Messrs. Muss Arnolt and Vinton Breese, men cool, keen and relentless whether judging the dogs of friends or foes. That is their reputation. The third was Theodore Offerman, an amateur and a product of New York, a man who from early boyhood has been a lover of dogs and who has done more than his share to place the dog game on the high plane it is to-day. His dignified manner had a charm which added to the surroundings of this American classic. ings of this American classic.

Of the sixteen dogs which entered the ring all but seven were quickly weeded out. The first dog to be put through his paces was Barkentine. The crowd greeted him with much applause and the dog seemed to enter into the spirit of the occasion. Next came the wire haired fox terrier Miss Springtime, owned by Homer B. Gage of Worcester, Mass. She showed better than at any time during the week, but seemed fated not to impress the Judges the way she was expected to. She is one of the highest class dogs of any breed that ever walked

Following the shepherd came the chow. Li Ping Tow, owned by the Greenare Kennels. He walked very prettily. He was in full bloom, has a wonderful coat, but it shades a bit. A chow, to be truly great, must be of a solid color, not streaked, He should be either ged, cream, black or blue, and when it comes down to keen competition a dog with a shaded coat is always handicapped.

Then followed the second wire haired fox terrier to survive the weeding out process, Boatman's Selection, owned by Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Newton of this city. The competition was a bit too keen for him. Following the shepherd came the chow

Boxwood Barkentine, a wonderful American bred Airedale, was crowned King of Dogdom yesterday afternoon at the greatest show the Westminster Kennel Club has had in many years. The reserve was the veteran imported greyhound Lansdowne Sunflower, the heroine of more than fifty shows and a keen contender for stellar homors on several occasions at the Big Show.

An American bred now appeared in the Irish terrier Blarney Thorncroft Reddight, shown by her owner, John G. Bates. He, I think, was the only owner to show his own dogs. She had a number of friends, but was shown a bit thin and looked tucked up in the loins.

Man Jongg Supplanting

Bridge in World's Centers

SHANGHAI, Jan. 19 (Correspondence of the Associated Press).

—Man Jongs, a game the Chinese have been playing since before the days of Confucius, has almost supplanted bridge in the clubs and other foreign gathering places of Shanghai. Reports from London, Paris and New York say that it also has gained a firm foothold in those western centers.

The game is played with 134 tiles of Ivory and thimble shaped like dominoes, and the play in drawing and discarding by four players in turn is somewhat like the card game called "runmy." The pastime floids such elements for heavy loss or gain that, ordinarily, fixed limits on stakes are imposed.
